2016 Cranberry Production Up Slightly

The forecast for the 2016 cranberry crop is 8.59 million barrels, up slightly from 2015.

Growers in Wisconsin expect a better than average year as mostly favorable weather conditions were reported, despite a few isolated reports of hail damage. Growers in Washington reported good weather for pollination and are expecting a similar crop as that of 2015. According to the August 2 United States Drought Monitor map, a majority of Massachusetts is experiencing severe drought. Northern New Jersey is also experiencing either abnormally dry or moderate drought conditions.

Statistical Methodology

Survey procedures: Standardized grower surveys are conducted in preparation for this report. Producers are contacted to obtain acreage and expected production. Telephone follow-up of mail survey non-respondents is used to ensure adequate coverage.

Estimating procedures: Information obtained from the cranberry grower survey along with federal administrative data is used to establish forecasts of total production. These forecasts are reviewed for errors, reasonableness, and consistency with historical estimates.

Revision policy: Cranberry production forecasts will not be revised. End-of-season estimates of production are made following harvest and are subject to revision the following year based on a thorough review of all available data.

Reliability: Survey indications are subject to sampling variability because all operations growing cranberries are not included in the sample. Survey results are also subject to non-sampling errors such as omission, duplication, imputation for missing data, and mistakes in reporting, recording, and processing the data. These errors cannot be measured directly, but they are minimized through rigid quality controls in the data collection process and a careful review of all reported data for consistency and reasonableness.
